Everything and everybody about Madison

"Now, this is real horse-show weather," said one smiling official to another. Even Diana, cold as she looked in her nudity, appeared to beam with pleasure from her high place on the tower, for the clear sky and crisp air were full of promise for this the third day of the greatest horse-show America (27). nudity, appeared to beam with pleasure from

THE BUGLER. The good feeling extended to every part of the Garden, the stable boys whistling merrily as they moved briskly about their charges in the stalls, and the equine beauties neighing with pleasure while their toilets were

In the ring the grooms were having a little Show of their own before the doors were opened to the general public, and as they took the jumps they gave vent to their high spirits in shouts of glee.

That is, those who got over did, but there were some whose mounts refused the fence and the diagust of these was increased by the chorus of "Take him out" which reached

MISS ROSEMARIE'S PONY TRAP.

The grooms were not the first to occupy the ring, however. As early as 6.30 o'clock this morning Mr. Eugene Higgins was guiding an imposing four-in-hand around the tan-bark inclosure, and he was followed by other gentlemen who had hurried away from home to spend a few minutes with their pets before going down to business.

There was a lobby full of such enthusiasts about the big fron gates waiting for the ticket-takers to take their places when the clock marked the hour of a. As soon as they got in they scattered, and five minutes later were seen taking in a knowing manner with the grooms in the horse quarters down in the basement.

APPIXING THE BLUE RIBBON. AFFIXING THE BILUE MIRRON.

It is a good time to visit the Garden this first hour of the morning. Such another opportunity of inspecting the beauties closely is not afforded during the day as white they are unblanketed for the perfection of their toilets. From 9 until 0.45 a. M. was set apart for the exercise of saddle horses, hunters, cobs and ponies under saddle in the ring. It brought out a fine collection of animals, and the interest of the occasion was heightened by the practice of S. S. Howland's crack jumper Ontario and his stable companion Backus.

Mr. Charles F. Bates drove into the ring with four bays, whose style and action were the subject of much favorable comment. The four-year-old bay trotter. King Dariington, was much admired as he moved gracefully about drawing a light road wagon.

Be on yesterday, the show was getting be-bind with its programme, but the gathering spectators appeared content, for there was enough grace and beauty being displayed before them to satisfy the most captious.

Already there was a human friege about the foal fence, the balcony seats were dotted and several of the boxes were occupied.

This was the programme prepared for today:

The exercise of stallions to be led in the ring was omitted this morning, much to the regret of the speciators, who rightly think that the appearance of these beautiful creatures is one of the most interesting leatures of the show.
